

Way to Amazonia 10

The women chat amicably as they walk along through the forest. When they finally arrive at the small village they huddle together, not at all sure how to go about this. haski, being a politician, steps forward to talk with the chief of the tribe. They exchange greetings and eye each other curiously as do all the women present.

During the walk towards the village the euro-sappho tribe has agreed that they would like to stay a short while with the amazonian tribe if they would be allowed to. Their scientific interest had been aroused by the savage dykes.

haski and the chief seem to argue a bit and finally haski turns to Jane H. with the chief's request. She too wants to have one wish fulfilled by the genie. Jane talks it over with the genie who finally agrees. The chief beams with pleasure and whispers her wish in the genies ear. She says to haski that she will let the eurosappho tribe stay but only if the genie fulfills her wish satisfactory. She then turns and follows the beckoning genie into the forest.

Approximately two hours later they return and with a small movement of her hand the chief invites the eurosappho tribe into the festivity hut.
